Q10. Compare a kingdom and a democracy on the three big questions: WHO rules, HOW decisions are made, and HOW power is limited.

Answer: WHO rules: in a kingdom, ONE person (the king) rules, usually by birth; in a democracy, the PEOPLE rule through elected representatives. HOW decisions are made: in a kingdom, by orders from the king; in a democracy, by discussion in assemblies, voting and laws made through Parliament. HOW power is limited: in a kingdom, the king's power is often unlimited; in a democracy, the ruler's power is limited by a written Constitution, by independent courts, by elections, and by citizens' rights even the ruler cannot take away.

Q11. A village's well has been broken for two months. Why is the LOCAL government the best level to fix this problem? Use the ideas of GRAM SWARAJ and the 73rd Amendment in your answer.

Answer: The Union and State governments are far away — they cannot easily know that a particular well in a particular village is broken or which families it serves. The LOCAL Panchayat is closest to the people: it lives with the problem, can inspect it the same day, and can call the gram sabha to decide. Gandhi's idea of GRAM SWARAJ — village self-rule — argues that strong villages make a strong India, with each village solving its own problems. The 73rd Amendment (1992) gave Panchayats a constitutional foundation, regular elections, reserved seats for women / SCs / STs and clear powers, including over local water and sanitation. So fixing the well is exactly the kind of task local government was designed for.

Closeness, knowledge, accountability + 73rd Amendment.
